

Bio Inki

Inki, known as Ingibjörg Friðriksdóttir to her parents and the postman, creates music for late-night drives and the feeling of going barefoot on the dancefloor. Her tracks are carefully composed, driven by slightly over-caffeinated ideas – think subtly hip hop laced scandi pop or if James Blake and Lykke Li had a drunken heart to heart in an Icelandic mountain cabin. On stage, she brings a warm and light hearted energy, creating a genuine connection with her audience. Offstage, she's probably lost in 48 browser tabs.

Following the sold-out concert of her debut album Thoughts Midsentence, Inki is now finishing up her second album while planning her first international tour. Catch her this November at Iceland Airwaves.

Locally Grown – Album Concept

It's emotional intimacy wrapped in junk food. On „Locally Grown“ Inki handpicks told and untold stories of loved ones, family members, strangers and ghosts from her community. Holding small, homegrown moments to the light – eating takout on the floor, learning line dancing – she admires the impact of everyday interactions on our lives.

The first single from „Locally Grown“ album came out on September 1st, 2025, with four more to follow before the end of the year.
